LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS,
Washington, D. C., December 12, 1932.

SIR:

I transmit herewith the Abstract of the Fifteenth Census. This volume contains a selection of the most essential statistics collected at the census of 1930 for population, including occupations, families, and unemployment; for agriculture, including type of farm, irrigation, and drainage; for manufactures; for mines and quarries; and for wholesale and retail distribution, construction, and hotels. These statistics relate primarily to continental United States, comprising the 48 States and the District of Columbia. A separate section, however, gives condensed tables from the census of outlying territories and possessions of the United States.

This volume has been assembled under the editorial supervision of Dr. George B. L. Arner, who was in charge of the Census of Unemployment for the Fifteenth Census.

Respectfully,

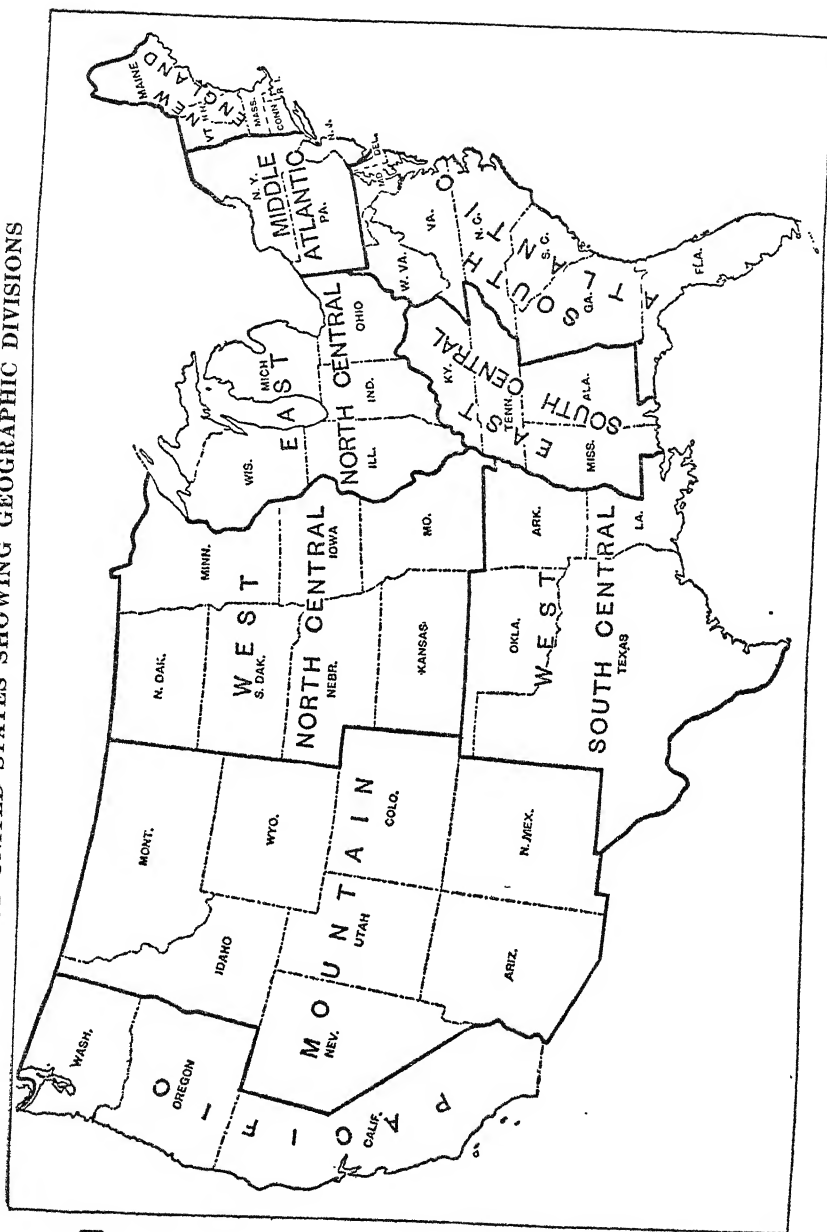

W. M. STEUART,
Director of the Census.

Hon. ROY D. CHAPIN,
Secretary of Commerce.

MAP OF UNITED STATES SHOWING GEOGRAPHIC DIVISIONS

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

This Abstract summarizes the most important and significant statistics contained in the Reports of the Fifteenth Census, and is designed to meet the requirements of those who desire the statistics for the census as a whole in convenient form for ready reference, or who may not have access to the complete reports.

The Abstract is divided into 13 parts: Population (General), Occupations, Families, Unemployment, Agriculture, Irrigation and Drainage, Manufactures, Mines and Quarries, Wholesale and Retail Distribution, Construction, Hotels, and Outlying Territories and Possessions. This presentation conforms in general to that of the Fifteenth Census Reports. Each part contains a detailed table of contents and an introductory statement in which technical terms used in the tables are defined and in which the uses and limitations of the statistical tables are explained.

Nearly all of the tables presenting statistics by States also give figures for the United States as a whole and for nine groups of States designated as geographic divisions. Each of these geographic divisions is made up of from three to eight contiguous States which are more or less similar in the characteristics of their population. These geographic divisions with their component States are given below and they are also outlined in the map on the opposite page.

NEW ENGLAND DIVISION:	WEST NORTH CENTRAL DIVISION:	WEST SOUTH CENTRAL DIVISION:
Maine.	Minnesota.	Arkansas.
New Hampshire.	Iowa.	Louisiana.
Vermont.	Missouri.	Oklahoma.
Massachusetts.	North Dakota.	Texas.
Rhode Island.	South Dakota.
Connecticut.	Nebraska.	MOUNTAIN DIVISION:
MIDDLE ATLANTIC DIVISION:	Kansas.	Montana.
New York.	SOUTH ATLANTIC DIVISION:	Idaho.
New Jersey.	Delaware.	Wyoming.
Pennsylvania.	Maryland.	Colorado.
EAST NORTH CENTRAL	District of Columbia.	New Mexico.
DIVISION:	Virginia.	Arizona.
Ohio.	West Virginia.	Utah.
Indiana.	North Carolina.	Nevada.
Illinois.	South Carolina.	PACIFIC DIVISION:
Michigan.	Georgia.	Washington.
Wisconsin.	Florida.	Oregon.
	EAST SOUTH CENTRAL DIVISION:	California.
	Kentucky.
	Tennessee.
	Alabama.
	Mississippi.

On every subject covered in this volume, much more detailed information can be obtained in the Reports of the Fifteenth Census. A list of these reports is printed on page II, and a more detailed list of the publications of each division of the Bureau appears in the introduction to each part of this volume. Information in still further detail, especially for small areas, beyond that which appears in any published report or bulletin, can often be obtained from the Bureau of the Census for the cost of transcription from the original tables.

The map illustrates the migration of the center of population in the Eastern United States over time. The years shown are 1790, 1800, 1810, 1820, 1830, 1840, 1850, 1860, 1870, 1880, 1890, 1900, 1910, 1920, and 1930. The center of population moves from the northeast (near Philadelphia/Baltimore) in 1790, through the mid-Atlantic region, and eventually into the Appalachian region (near Knoxville/Tenn.) by 1930. Key geographical features include the Chesapeake Bay, Delaware River, Ohio River, Kentucky River, Tennessee River, and the Appalachian Mountains. Major cities like New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and Cincinnati are marked.

POPULATION

INTRODUCTION

Total population.—The data presented in this section of the Abstract relate to the population of continental United States, except for Table 1, which gives the population of the United States and all its outlying territories and possessions. Figures are given for States and counties, for cities and other urban places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and for urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm areas.

Urban and rural areas.—Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classified as rural. In New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, towns (townships) are classified as urban if they have more than 2,500 inhabitants and certain urban characteristics, and a few large townships in other States are likewise classified as urban under a special rule; these townships and the New England towns constituting the exceptions to the general definition of urban population are indicated by asterisks in Tables 16 to 19.

Farm population.—Both rural and urban population are subdivided into farm and nonfarm, though for the urban-farm population nothing except the total number is given. The farm population comprises all persons living on farms, without regard to occupation. The rural-farm population includes more than 99 per cent of the total farm population. The rural-nonfarm (or "village") population includes small manufacturing villages and trading centers, unincorporated suburban areas, mining settlements, etc., and a considerable number of families living in the open country but not on farms.

Color and nativity.—In the main tabulations of the population by color or race, three groups are distinguished, namely, white, Negro, and "Other races." In a few of the tables, however, the third group is subdivided into its constituent parts, the principal ones being Mexican, Indian, Chinese, and Japanese. Mexicans were shown separately for the first time in 1930, the enumerators being instructed to return as Mexican all persons born in Mexico or having parents born in Mexico who were not definitely white, Negro, Indian, Chinese, or Japanese. The Mexican population was for the most part included in the white population in 1920 and in earlier censuses. For comparative purposes, however, the Mexican population in 1920 and 1910 has been estimated, and the 1920 and 1910 figures for the white population in most of the tables have been adjusted to a basis comparable with those for 1930 by subtracting these estimates.

In the classification by nativity, a person born in the United States or in any of its territories or possessions is counted as native. The tabulations showing nativity and parentage are for the most part restricted to the white population. The native white population is usually divided into two groups, those of native parentage (both parents native) and those of foreign or mixed parentage (one or both parents foreign born). The second group is in some tables subdivided so as to show separately those of foreign parentage (both parents foreign born) and those of mixed parentage (one parent native and the other foreign born).

State of birth.—The native population is classified by State of birth, the resulting figures giving some indication of interstate migration.

Country of birth.—The foreign-born population is classified according to country of birth, the European countries being presented in accordance with their postwar boundaries.

Foreign white stock by country of origin.—The foreign white stock, as defined by the Census Bureau, is composed of two distinct elements, the foreign-born white and the native white of foreign or mixed parentage. In the tables showing country of origin the foreign-born white are classified according to country of birth, and the native white of foreign or mixed parentage according to country of birth of father, except where the father is native and the mother foreign born, in which case the classification is according to country of birth of mother.

Mother tongue.—Statistics of mother tongue are presented only for the foreign-born white population. Mother tongue is defined as the language commonly spoken in the home before coming to the United States. The tables showing mother tongue by country of birth are particularly significant as indicating the ethnic stock of the population which has come to the United States from certain of the European countries.

Citizenship.—In the classification of the foreign-born population by citizenship four groups are shown, namely, naturalized, having first papers (that is, having made formal declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States), alien, and a group designated "Unknown," made up of persons whose citizenship status was not reported. Citizenship figures are presented for the foreign-born white population in considerable detail, and for foreign-born Negroes and Mexicans in more condensed form. Foreign-born Chinese, Japanese, and Indians are not eligible to citizenship and are all classed as aliens.

Year of immigration.—The foreign-born white population has been tabulated by year of immigration for several censuses. For 1930 alone these figures are presented by country of birth.

Age.—The age classification in the census returns is based on age at last birthday; that is, age in completed years. In view of the increasing interest in the age composition of the population, the 1930 population data have been classified by age more extensively than those of any previous census.

Marital condition.—The classification as to marital condition—that is, whether single, married, widowed, or divorced—is presented in most cases for the male and female population 15 years old and over, though in some of the tables this classification is given for the various ages in order to bring out significant differences.

School attendance.—The school attendance tabulation is based on the replies to the enumerator's inquiry as to whether the person had attended school or college of any kind since September 1, 1929. Since the inquiry was made for the most part in April, 1930, the returns should include practically all persons who attended school for any part of the school year 1929-30. The whole number will therefore include some persons who attended school for a short time only and who were not attending at the time of the enumeration. Attention is called especially to two tables (Tables 136 and 137) presenting data on the number of young persons neither gainfully occupied nor at school, and the number both at work and at school.

Illiteracy.—The Census Bureau defines as illiterate any person 10 years old and over who is not able to read and write, either in English or in some other language. The classification is based on answers given to the enumerator in response to the question "Whether able to read and write." No specific test of ability to read and write was prescribed, but the enumerators were instructed not to return the answer "Yes" (which would classify the person as literate) simply because the person was able to write his or her name.

Inability to speak English.—The foreign-born population has been tabulated in accordance with ability to speak English for several censuses. In 1930, however, for the first time, this tabulation has been made in combination with country of birth and with literacy. The latter combination provides, among other data, the number of persons able to read and write (presumably in their native language) but not able to speak English.

Detailed reports on population.—The population statistics presented in this section of the Abstract have been taken from the first three volumes of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Population, in which are presented much more detailed statistics on the same subjects. Each of these three volumes is made up of a series of bulletins, most of which can be obtained in separate form by those desiring the statistics for a single State or for a single subject. The volumes and the series of bulletins are as follows:

Volume I.—Number and Distribution of Inhabitants.

First Series Population Bulletins: Published for each State, and for the United States as a whole.

Volume II.—General Report—Statistics by Subjects.

This volume comprises the following chapters, which are published as separate bulletins:

- Chapter 1. Urban and Rural Population, Metropolitan Districts, and Center of Population.
- Chapter 2. Color or Race, Nativity, and Parentage.
- Chapter 3. Sex Distribution.
- Chapter 4. State of Birth of the Native Population.
- Chapter 5. Country of Birth of the Foreign Born.
- Chapter 6. Country of Origin of the Foreign White Stock.
- Chapter 7. Mother Tongue of the Foreign-born White Population.
- Chapter 8. Citizenship of the Foreign Born.
- Chapter 9. Year of Immigration of the Foreign Born.
- Chapter 10. Age Distribution.
- Chapter 11. Marital Condition.
- Chapter 12. School Attendance.
- Chapter 13. Illiteracy.
- Chapter 14. Inability to Speak English.

Volume III.—Reports by States, Showing the Composition and Characteristics of the Population for Counties, Cities, and Townships or Other Minor Civil Divisions.

Part 1, comprising the United States Summary and the States arranged alphabetically from Alabama to Missouri.

Part 2, comprising the States from Montana to Wyoming.

Second Series Population Bulletins: Published for each State and for the United States as a whole.

¹ The figures given for the various census years represent the area of all the land within the present boundaries of continental United States which was under the jurisdiction of the United States on the date in question, including in some cases considerable areas of land not then organized or settled and not covered by the census.² In comparing this percentage of increase with that shown for the decade 1910-1920, allowance should be made for the fact that the period between the censuses of 1910 and 1920 was less than a full decade, and that between the 1920 and 1930 censuses was more than a full decade. An increase of 16.1 per cent for 123 months (the time between Jan. 1, 1920, and Apr. 1, 1930) is equivalent to 15.7 per cent for exactly 10 years; and the 1920 increase for 116½ months (the time between Apr. 15, 1910, and Jan. 1, 1920) is equivalent to 15.4 per cent for 120 months. Making this adjustment, the rate of increase for the decade ending in 1930 is only slightly higher than that for the preceding decade.³ The census of 1870 is recognized as having been incomplete in the Southern States. Accepting an estimate made in the 1890 Report on Population, the corrected population of 1870 is 39,818,449, making an increase from 1860 to 1870 of 26.6 per cent instead of 22.6, and from 1870 to 1880 an increase of 26.0 per cent instead of 30.1.

¹ Based on combined figures for Indian Territory and Oklahoma Territory for 1900.² Total land area includes part of Yellowstone National Park, geographically located in Idaho (47 square miles), Montana (240 square miles), and Wyoming (2,973 square miles). Total population of park returned as in Wyoming in years prior to 1930.

¹ The total number of places of certain classes for the United States as a whole is less than the sum of the numbers shown for the individual States in Table 8, for the reason that there are a few places which lie in two adjoining States and are counted in each State. In 1930, these places included Bluefield (Virginia and West Virginia), Bristol (Tennessee and Virginia), Delmar (Delaware and Maryland), Harrison and West Harrison (Ohio and Indiana), Junction City (Arkansas and Louisiana), Texarkana (Arkansas and Texas), Texhoma (Oklahoma and Texas), and Union City (Indiana and Ohio). Each of these places consists of two incorporated municipalities, but is, from the statistical standpoint, one place and is classed according to its total population. In each case that part of the population living in each State, whatever its number, is credited to the group to which, according to its total population, the place belongs. There are included in some of the groups in this table a small number of places not having a municipal incorporation, which are classified as urban in 1930 under special ruling (see p. 5.)

² See Table 15, p. 26, for population of urban places in cumulative groups.

¹ The decrease in per cent urban in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island is due to the change in classification by which towns (townships) of 2,500 or more having a settled area which was less than 50 per cent of the total population were not classed as urban. In 1920 all towns of 2,500 or more in these 3 States were classified as urban.

TABLE 11.—POSITION OF THE CENTER OF POPULATION: 1790 TO 1930

[The center of population may be said to represent the center of gravity of the population. If the surface of the United States be considered as a rigid level plane without weight and the population distributed thereon, all individuals being assumed to have equal weight, the point on which this plane would balance would be the center of population. This pivotal point would be the center of gravity of the hypothetical plane; and its location would be affected not only by the numbers of persons on the different parts of the plane, but also by the distance of each individual from the "center." The computations for the center of population are made for continental United States, omitting Alaska and the other outlying Territories and possessions.]

TABLE 21.- POPULATION, LAND AREA, AND DENSITY, FOR METROPOLITAN DISTRICTS: 1930

[The metropolitan districts for the census of 1930, as here presented, include, in addition to the central city or cities, all adjacent and contiguous civil divisions having a density of 150 inhabitants or more per square mile, and also, as a rule, those civil divisions of less density that are directly contiguous to the central cities, or are entirely or nearly surrounded by minor civil divisions that have the required density. This is essentially the same procedure as that followed in determining the metropolitan districts for cities of over 200,000 inhabitants at the censuses of 1910 and 1920, except that the area which might be included within the metropolitan district was then limited to the territory within 10 miles of the city boundary, while no such limit was applied in 1930.]

Ninety-six metropolitan districts have been established, each having an aggregate population of 100,000 or more and containing one or more central cities of 50,000 or more inhabitants. No metropolitan district was established for those cities which did not have in the central city and surrounding area a population of at least 100,000. The metropolitan districts are designated by the name of the central city, or in those cases where the area includes two or more important cities no one of which can properly be regarded as the central or dominant city, by the combined names of such cities. The total population of these 96 metropolitan districts in 1930 was 54,753,645 of which 37,814,610 was in the central cities and 16,939,035 was outside]

OCCUPATIONS

INTRODUCTION

The questions relating to occupations included on the population schedule call for (1) a statement of the "trade, profession, or particular kind of work done" by each gainful worker, (2) a statement of the "industry or business" in which he (or she) works, and (3) a statement as to whether he (or she) is (a) an employer, (b) a wage or salary worker, (c) working on his (or her) own account, or (d) an unpaid family worker. No compilation was made, however, of the returns on the third inquiry, nor of the occupations returned for children under 10 years old.

Gainful workers.—The term "gainful workers," in census usage, includes all persons 10 years old and over who usually follow a gainful occupation, even though they may not have been employed when the census was taken. It does not include women doing housework in their own homes, without wages, and having no other employment, nor children working at home, merely on general household work, on chores, or at odd times on other work. Statistics relating to women home-makers are presented in the section on "Families."

Occupation classification.—In so far as it was practicable to make it such, the classification of gainful workers presented in Tables 3 and 20 is occupational rather than industrial. In general, all the workers in a specified occupation are grouped together without regard to the different industries in which the occupation is pursued; and each occupation, excepting clerical occupations, is classified in that part of the industrial field in which the occupation is most commonly pursued. For example, all electricians are grouped together and are classified under "Manufacturing and mechanical industries," though electricians are employed in almost every industry. Clerical occupations, not being more common in one part of the industrial field than in another, are made a separate class.

The occupational classification presented in this abstract is quite different from the industrial classification presented in Volume III, and in chapter 7 of Volume V, of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Population. In that classification each industry is treated as a separate unit and all the workers in the industry are classified thereunder, irrespective of the occupations they pursue. Because of this fundamental difference between these two classifications, the figures shown for their main subdivisions—agriculture, forestry and fishing, etc.—will differ considerably.

Comparative figures.—Since the 1930 census occupation classification differs somewhat from that of 1920, it has been necessary, for comparison, to assign a few 1920 occupations to general divisions of occupations different from those under which they were presented at the earlier census. Further, in a few cases in 1930 an occupational designation as returned by the enumerators was assigned to an occupation group different from that under which it would have been classified at the earlier census. Wherever such changes were made the figures will not be exactly comparable, though the differences are usually negligible.

Color and nativity.—In most of the classifications of gainful workers by color and nativity, here presented, four classes are distinguished, namely, (1) native white, that is, white persons born in the United States or in any of its territories or possessions; (2) foreign-born white; (3) Negro, including both black and mulatto; (4) other races, comprising Mexicans, Indians, Chinese, Japanese, etc. In Table 11, the principal minor races making up Group 4 are shown separately. At censuses prior to 1930, Mexicans were included for the most part with the white population. In 1930, all persons born in Mexico or having parents born in Mexico, who were not definitely returned as white, Negro, Indian, Chinese, or Japanese, were classified separately as "Mexican."

Age.—The age classification in census statistics is based on age at last birthday, that is, age in completed years.

Marital condition.—Fifteenth Census statistics relating to the marital condition of gainful workers are limited to statistics for females.

Children in gainful occupations.—The statistics relating to gainfully occupied children, here presented, are limited to children 10 to 15 years old—the children commonly included when referring to "child labor."

Detailed reports on occupations.—The occupations statistics presented in this section of the Abstract are from Volumes IV and V of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Population. Each of these volumes is made up of a series of bulletins, most of which can be obtained in separate form by those desiring statistics for a single State or for a single subject. The volumes and the bulletins are as follows:

Volume IV.—Occupations—Reports by States.

This volume presents for the several States and for their principal cities the more important occupation statistics, together with a summary for the entire United States.

Volume V.—General Report on Occupations.

Volume V comprises 7 chapters, in the first six of which the statistics are presented by occupations, for the United States, by geographic divisions and States, and for cities of 25,000 or more. In chapter 7, statistics for the United States only are presented, giving the total number of workers, classified by occupation, sex, color, nativity, and age, for each of the more important industries and for each service group. The titles of the chapters are as follows:

- Chapter 1.—Enumeration and Classification of Occupations.
- Chapter 2.—Sex and Occupation of Gainful Workers.
- Chapter 3.—Color and Nativity of Gainful Workers.
- Chapter 4.—Age of Gainful Workers.
- Chapter 5.—Marital Condition of Occupied Women.
- Chapter 6.—Children in Gainful Occupations.
- Chapter 7.—Gainful Workers by Industry and Occupation.

¹ Because of changes made in 1930 in the classification of agricultural pursuits, it is impossible to group the 1920 occupations exactly according to the 1930 classification. It is believed, however, that the effect of the difference in grouping on the comparability of the figures here presented is negligible. In addition to the changes referred to, proprietors, foremen, and laborers on turpentine farms, classified in "Agriculture, forestry, etc." in 1920, were transferred to "Manufacturing and mechanical industries" in 1930.

² Since, in 1920, only farm laborers on general farms were distinguished as working on the "home farm" or "working out," farm laborers on dairy farms, stock farms, truck farms, poultry farms, etc., who were, in fact, working on the home farm as unpaid family workers were not included in the group "Farm laborers (home farm)." Hence, as here compiled for 1920, the number of farm laborers classified as "Wageworkers" probably is somewhat too large, and the number classified as "Unpaid family workers" probably is somewhat too small.

⁶ Not otherwise specified.

¹⁸ Includes the few laborers reported in rayon factories in 1920. See, also, footnote 20.

¹⁹ "Farm laborers (turpentine farm)" were classified in "Agriculture" in 1920. See, also, footnote 20.

²⁰ Laborers in bedding and quilt factories, hat and cap materials factories, and millinery factories, all included in the group "Other miscellaneous industries" in 1920, and laborers in white goods factories, included in the group "Other clothing factories" in 1920, were classified in the group "Other and not specified textile mills" in 1930.

²¹ Not classified separately in 1920.

²² Neither in 1920 nor in 1930 was the attempt to distinguish chauffeurs and motor truck drivers from draymen, teamsters, and carriage drivers very successful.

²³ Teamsters in agriculture, forestry, and the extraction of minerals are classified with the other workers in those industries, respectively; drivers for bakeries and stores are classified as delivery men in trade; and drivers for laundries are classified as delivery men in domestic and personal service.

²⁴ Included with "Draymen, teamsters, and expressmen" in 1920.

FAMILIES

INTRODUCTION

In this section are presented statistics relating to families in continental United States. Figures are given for States, for cities and other urban places having 25,000 inhabitants or more, and for urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm areas.

Definition of family.—The term "family," as it is used in the tabulation of the results of the 1930 census, is limited in the main to what might be called private families, excluding the institutions and hotel or boarding-house groups which have been counted as families in prior censuses. A family may therefore be defined in general as a group of persons related either by blood or by marriage or adoption, who live together as one household, usually sharing the same table. Single persons living alone are counted as families, however, as are a few small groups of unrelated persons sharing the same living accommodations as "partners." Households reporting more than 10 lodgers are classified as boarding or lodging houses rather than as families. Two or more related persons occupying permanent quarters in a hotel are counted as a private family rather than as a part of the hotel group.

Color and nativity.—Families are classified according to the color and nativity of the head. A foreign-born white family, for example, is a family whose head is a foreign-born white person. Since most of the children in a family of this kind are likely to be native (of foreign or mixed parentage), the percentage of the population classified as native white is considerably higher in most areas than the percentage of the families so classified.

Tenure of home.—Since a home is defined as the living quarters occupied by a family, the number of homes is always the same as the number of families. In the classification by tenure a home is counted as owned if it is owned wholly or in part by any related member of the family.

Size of family.—In the classification of families according to size only those persons related to the head of the family by blood, marriage, or adoption are counted, lodgers, resident servants, guests, and foster children or wards being omitted. Size of family in this sense differs considerably from the average population per family which may be obtained by dividing the total population by the number of families, since the latter includes lodgers and other unrelated persons.

Median size and value.—In addition to the classification of families by size and of nonfarm homes by value or rental, medians are presented for size of family and value or rental of home. The median value is the value of the home which would stand in the middle of the series if all of the homes were arranged according to value, beginning with the lowest and ending with the highest. It is not possible from the data available to compute the arithmetical average of the value or monthly rental, since no definite value can be assigned to the first value group (under $1,000) or to the last ($20,000 and over). The median is therefore the most practicable and useful of the summary figures that could be computed.

The median size of family, since it is presented with a decimal or fraction, must be interpreted in an abstract or theoretical sense, rather than literally. For practical purposes, however, it is not necessary to go into the mathematical theory, or the process of computing the median. It may simply be accepted as a convenient summary figure representing the size of the family in the various areas and the various population classes. Medians of 3.34 for native white families and 3.74 for foreign-born white families, for example, indicate that the foreign-born white families are considerably the larger, and give a definite measure of the difference in size.

Value or rental of home.—The enumerator was instructed to report on the population schedule for each nonfarm family returned as owning its home the approximate current market value of the home, and for each nonfarm family returned as occupying rented quarters, the monthly rental, or if rental was not paid by the month, then the equivalent monthly rental or the approximate rental value per month. In the tabulation the values and the rentals have been assembled into 10 groups, and the figures presented represent the number of homes in each of these groups.

Children under 10 and under 21 years old.—In making the classification of families according to number of children under 10 or under 21 years of age, the whole number of such children in the family who are related in any way to the head of the family is counted, including adopted children, grandchildren, nephews, nieces, etc., though the children of the head of the family make up by far the larger part of the total number of children.

Gainful workers.—In the classification of families according to the number of gainful workers, all the related members of the family who were reported as usually working at a gainful occupation are counted, including some who were temporarily unemployed at the time of the census. Gainfully employed lodgers or boarders are not counted. The families reporting no gainful workers are mainly those of widows and of elderly men who have retired from active employment.

Lodgers.—In the classification of families according to number of lodgers, certain other persons besides those directly returned as lodgers or boarders are included, the more important of these being farm laborers living in a farm family, foster children or wards, and guests. On the other hand, it should be noted that no household having more than 10 lodgers is included in the classification of private families.

Age of head of family.—In the tables presented herewith the classification of families by age of head is limited to those families with a man as head. Since these comprise about seven-eighths of the whole number, however, this presentation is believed to be fairly adequate.

Employment status of home-maker.—The enumerator, in filling out the population schedule, was instructed to designate as "home-maker" that woman member of the family who was responsible for the care of the home and family. (Hired housekeepers were not counted as home-makers.) On the basis of this designation, certain information with regard to the home-maker has been tabulated; in particular, information as to whether or not the home-maker pursued a gainful occupation in addition to caring for the home. The number of gainfully employed home-makers is first divided into those employed at home and those employed away from home; each group is then further subdivided according to the kind of occupation followed. All professional workers are included in the class designated as employed away from home, even though in a few cases the professional work may be done in the worker's own home, it being considered very important to show in this group the whole number of home-makers doing professional work. Home-makers returned as engaged in agricultural occupations at home consist partly of women operating their own farms and partly of women working on the home farm without wages.

Quasi-family groups.—The households or population groups which have been omitted from the 1930 count of families (private families) are shown separately in Tables 22, 39, and 52, under the designation "quasi-family groups," with the number of persons in them. Table 22 shows separately the number of institutions, boarding and lodging houses, hotels, etc., included in this classification.

Families having radio set.—The tabulations relating to radio sets show the number of families (not including institutions, etc.) having a radio set. The figures, therefore, do not represent the whole number of radio sets in existence or in use, since one family may have two or more sets, and since there are a considerable number of sets in use in stores and other commercial or industrial buildings, and in hotels, boarding houses, and institutions.

Dwellings.—A dwelling, for census purposes, is a place in which one or more persons regularly sleep. It need not be a house in the usual sense of the word. A boat, a tent, or a room in a factory or office building, although occupied by only one person, is also counted as a dwelling; while, on the other hand, an entire apartment house, although containing many families, constitutes but one dwelling.

Dwellings have been classified into three groups, namely (a) those occupied by 1 family only, (b) those occupied by 2 families, and (c) those occupied by 3 or more families. It has been found difficult in some cases, particularly in cities where the houses are built in solid blocks, to make this classification. The enumerators were instructed to return as 1 dwelling a 2-family house with one apartment above the other, even though there was a separate front door for each apartment. On the other hand, where 2 families occupied parts of a building separated by a solid wall running up through the building, each part was counted as a dwelling, and likewise each "house" in a block or section of "row" houses.

The figures for dwellings in earlier censuses include the premises occupied by institutions, etc., which is in harmony with the inclusion of such population groups in the count of the number of families. The number of dwellings presented for 1930, except where specially noted, is the number occupied by private families.

Urban, rural-farm, and rural-nonfarm areas.—Urban population, as defined by the Census Bureau, is in general that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, the remainder being classified as rural. For a further explanation of this classification, see page 5.

Detailed reports on families.—The family statistics presented in this section of the Abstract have been taken from Volume VI of the Fifteenth Census Reports on Population, entitled "Families." This volume is made up of a series of bulletins, one for each State and one for the United States as a whole. Most of these bulletins can be obtained in separate form by those desiring the statistics for a single State, or for the United States alone.

TABLE 2.—TENURE OF HOMES, FARM AND NONFARM, FOR THE UNITED STATES: 1890 TO 1930

[Figures for 1930 and 1900 represent private-family homes alone; those for 1920, 1910, and 1890 include the premises occupied by the small number of institutions and other quasi-family groups which were counted as families in the respective censuses. In 1890 the "tenure unknown" was distributed between "owned" and "rented"]

¹ Exclusive of 325,464 persons, specially enumerated in Indian Territory and on Indian reservations, for whom family data are not available.

² Includes lodgers and resident servants.

³ In addition to the number of normal or private families, the count of families in censuses prior to 1930 has included certain aggregates of population, such as institutions, hotels, boarding houses, and construction camps. These quasi families are omitted from the general tabulation for families in 1930, but are included here for comparative purposes.

⁴ Based on the number of private families and the population in such families, including lodgers and resident servants.
